

ABSTRACT

A function name, a variable name, a comment sentence, or the like included in a script includes redundancy and affects transmitting efficiency. By replacing the function name or variable name consisting of a relatively long character string with a shorter character string (for example, with one alphabetic character), the data size of the script is reduced. By further deleting comment sentences in the script, data size is also reduced.